WHAT IMPACTED FUND PERFORMANCE IN 2024?

The shorter-maturity U.S. Investment-grade quality bond market produced attractive total returns for 2024. These total returns were driven primarily by higher income levels that returned to the U.S. bond market following an extended period of interest rate hikes by the Federal Reserve in 2022 and 2023 to slow the economy and bring down the rate of inflation. The tightening of spreads in the non-U.S. Treasury sectors of credit and securitized also contributed to the attractive returns for the year.

The Investor Class Shares of the Baird Short-Term Bond Fund (BSBSX) posted a net total return of 4.73% in 2024. The Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index, a broad-based U.S. bond market index had a total return of 1.25% and the Fund’s primary benchmark, the Bloomberg 1-3 Year U.S. Government/Credit Index, had a total return of 4.36%.

The Fund outperformed its primary benchmark in 2024. Drivers of Fund performance described below are relative to the Fund’s primary benchmark.

Contributors to Performance

- Overweight investment grade credit
- Active positioning within investment grade credit - overweight financials as well as subsector and security selection decisions within financials (e.g., banking, insurance), subsector and security selection decisions within industrials (spread across many subsectors), and overweight BBB credit
- Overweight non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities (RMBS), non-agency commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS), and asset-backed securities (ABS)

Detractors from Performance

- Underweight 1-year maturities which outperformed as yield curve steepened
